Teaching health sciences?

The health sciences sector employs approximately 16 million people in the U.S. alone. But what skills do students need to join that number? What roles can they pursue in this popular industry?

In our latest CERTIFIED Podcast episode, healthcare leader Priya Mukundan, shares how to prepare students for careers in healthcare. Dive deep into how you, as an educator, can help them prepare for the fast-paced, ever-evolving world of healthcare and medicine.

Support your multilingual learners with Pearson English

Every confident conversation starts with a first hello.

Back to school is the perfect time to try something new. Start off strong by joining our free five-part webinar series: From First Hellos to Confident Futures in English.

Each live session offers practical guidance and new ideas to support language and soft-skills development, powered by the Global Scale of English. From September 22-26, learn from expert educators and discover strategies to help multilingual students grow in confidence — inside and outside the classroom.

In this series, we'll explore:

- Tips, tricks, and secrets using the Global Scale of English
- Simple ways to use AI in English teaching
- Staying relevant in the age of AI and building lasting learning habits

Continued...

- Creating a clear path forward with assessment
- Teaching the skills students need to thrive today and tomorrow

Participants will receive a professional development certificate after each session. Complete all five and earn a Pearson digital badge, issued via Credly!

I'm ready to register
