The Future of Animation

Gone are the days of kids gathering around the television to watch Saturday morning cartoons - in today's world they watch content online. As TV-like quality for multiple platforms continues to develop, the number of online viewers promises to soar – as does their demand for animated content. As a result, job growth in the animation industry is booming and the need for talented and skilled Toon Boom artists is at an all-time high!

As the recognized industry standard in both animation and storyboarding, Toon Boom technology is growing beyond traditional TV, film, and games production, rapidly expanding into video streaming services such as Netflix, Amazon Video, Hulu, and Starz to name a few.

The Education and Industry

Animation production continues to grow even further outside of its traditional applications in the entertainment industries. Today, the same animation production techniques used in film, television, video streaming, and games creation are also widely used in medical research, engineering, virtual reality and augmented reality systems, immersive media, web content, the performing arts, corporate communications, and in higher education.

Teacher Services

Toon Boom offers a wide range of professional development and self-learning services to support your academic goals and develop your skills as a teacher, helping you provide an excellent learning environment for your students.

The Future of Jobs

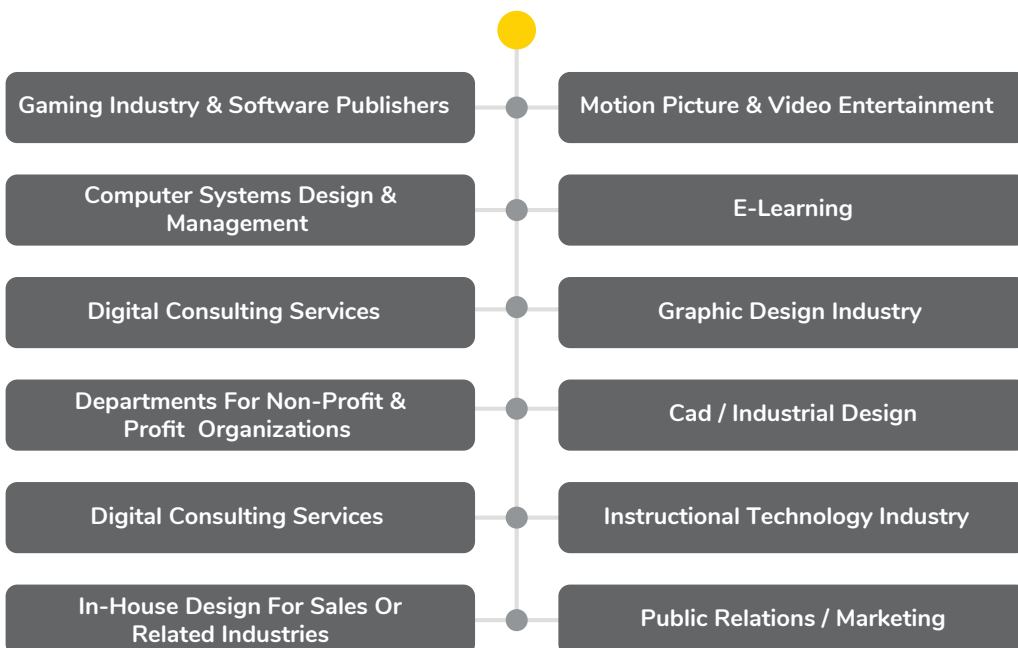

Technological innovation and progress consistently generate new employment opportunities for your future graduates. The demand for animated entertainment has expanded with the increase in broadcasting hours through the ever-growing popularity of streaming services. Toon Boom has been there from the start making us exceptionally qualified to help your students land the job of their dreams.

Animation has grown up

Animation used to be the realm of the impossible, illustrating worlds too imaginative or expensive to depict in live action film or television, often with series aimed solely at young children. Today's animation series are clever and complex, with productions created specifically for teenagers and adults alike.
